Ravenchase Adventures has designed a special hunt for the Virginia Museum of Fine Art's Mystery exhibition. The exhibit is the last of this year's Look Here Series and will be on display until December 30. Both the exhibit and the hunt are free of charge.

"The Virginia Museum of Fine Arts has been included in many Ravenchase public, private and corporate events, but this is the first dedicated adventure at VMFA. And what better topic than our Mystery exhibition, ideally suited for those who like to look beyond the obvious!", beamed Suzanne Hall, Acting Associate Director, Communications and Marketing.

Event developer, Andrew Mudd said, " It's very exciting for us to be able to donate our services to the VMFA. They have always been wholeheartedly supportive of our efforts. Our events are designed to encourage people to visit the wonderful venues our city has to offer. We often use local museums for clue locations. Many times folks tell us that they've always planned to visit but just haven't gotten around to it yet. We motivate them to break out of their neighborhood boundaries and explore. We help them to discover that being a tourist in our own backyard is exciting."

The hunt designed for Mystery is a beginner level event. One of its nicest features is that participants can play at their leisure without having to worry about racing against other teams. Museum visitors may pick up the Mystery hunt materials at the ticket counter.

The VMFA plans to have regular drawings for prizes, too. Only those who correctly complete the hunt and are able to open the treasure chest will be eligible for the drawings. Of course just experiencing Mystery and the VMFA is like striking Richmond gold.
